L2 Consulting Services Inc. Announces Executive Promotions

Dripping Springs, Texas – October 09, 2018 – A recognized leader in avionics integrations and installations, L2 Aviation announces new executive team promotions designed to strengthen high-value objectives for the organization.

Kevin Paul has been promoted to Vice President, Engineering Value Stream from manager of the Program Management department. Kevin has led many of L2's most complex and successful programs. During his time at L2, Kevin has proven his abilities by employing a detail-oriented management approach while maintaining a focus on L2's broader goals, expectations, and financial parameters.

In conjunction with Kevin's promotion, long-time team member Dean Rudolph has been promoted to Executive Vice President. Rudolph previously held the Vice President, Operations title. In this new role, he will be responsible for implementing company-wide initiatives to ensure the successful fulfillment of rapidly growing business opportunities; including, massively increasing the Remote Avionics Modification Services (RAMS) division to satisfy customer demand. Additionally, the entire Certification Team will now report directly to Dean, and he will spearhead the expansion of a full-featured certification department, offering L2 customers additional key services and products.

“Both Dean and Kevin are exceptionally talented individuals. Their dedication to excellence along with all of the hard-work they have displayed has made it very easy to be to promote them to these central and strategic roles at L2,” said Mark Lebovitz, L2 President. “With Dean’s visionary approach and Kevin superb execution abilities, all of our goals and initiatives will surely be achieved with great success.”

The promotions of both Dean and Kevin directly support L2’s overall strategic corporate and financial goals.
